

Editorial Message

Greetings from the Future, Dear Readers! 🚀

Welcome to the third issue of Volume 3 of Edumania. As we dive into the July-September quarter, we're not just publishing articles; we're launching a conversation about the future, and you—the youth—are at the heart of it.

This issue is a tribute to the power of your curiosity, your creativity, and your ambition. The world is changing faster than ever, and it's your generation that's driving that change, whether you're building new tech, challenging old ideas, or creating solutions to the problems of tomorrow. We believe that education is the most powerful tool you have, and our mission is to provide a platform where those tools are sharpened and shared.

Your Voice, Your Platform

At Edumania, we're building a space where you can connect with groundbreaking ideas and get inspired by the work of your peers. We're committed to making academic research accessible and relevant to you. This issue is packed with innovative research that tackles everything from cutting-edge technology and social science to the future of learning itself.

Our content, which includes original research and insightful reviews, is carefully selected to ensure it's not only academically rigorous but also genuinely useful to you. Think of these pages as a toolkit for your intellectual journey. We encourage you to not just read, but to think critically, challenge the status quo, and use this knowledge to fuel your own projects and passions.

Join the Movement

We know that great ideas come from everywhere. That's why we're not just looking for submissions from established academics; we're actively encouraging students and young researchers to share their work with us. If you have an idea, a research project, or a unique perspective, Edumania is your platform to get your voice heard. We believe in the power of peer review to refine and strengthen your work, helping you grow as a scholar and a leader.

Thank you to our dedicated team and, most importantly, to our authors who are paving the way for the next generation of thinkers. And to all our young readers: this journal is for you. Dive in, get inspired, and help us shape the future of education—together.

Sincerely,

Dr. Manisha D. Bhagoji

Associate Editor, Edumania