Greetings from the Future, Dear Readers!

Welcome to the final issue of 2025 for Edumania – An International Multidisciplinary Journal. As we conclude another year of scholarly exploration, this issue stands as a testament to the diverse and evolving landscape of multidisciplinary research, bridging the gap between traditional wisdom and future-ready innovation.

Guided by the vision of the International Council for Education Research and Training (ICERT), this publication continues to serve as a global platform for researchers across India, the USA, and beyond. Our mission remains rooted in fostering an ecosystem of ethical innovation and academic excellence.

In this issue, we delve into profound themes that reflect the complexities of the 21st century. A central highlight is the exploration of how literature serves as a "sanctuary," offering psychological resilience and fostering ecological responsibility in a rapidly changing world. By examining the intersection of the humanities and environmental ethics, our contributors challenge us to reconsider our role in the global ecosystem.

Furthermore, this volume aligns with our broader organizational commitment to integrating indigenous knowledge with modern advancements—a theme echoed in our upcoming international initiatives focused on building ethical innovation ecosystems. We believe that by documenting and analyzing diverse knowledge systems, we empower global citizens to navigate the challenges of disinformation and technological shifts with cognitive resilience.

We extend our deepest gratitude to the authors for their rigorous contributions, the reviewers for their invaluable feedback, and our editorial board for their unwavering dedication to maintaining high scholarly standards. We also thank our partner institutions, for their continued support in promoting collaborative research.

As we transition into 2026, Edumania remains committed to being a beacon for convergent knowledge, encouraging the integration of AI, ethics, and sustainability into syllabi across all disciplines.

We wish our readers a reflective and inspiring end to the year.

Sincerely,

Dr. Manisha D. Bhagoji
